

HERALD WED SEPT
16TH 1992.

Phil
Trust betrayed

Sir,—In the "good old days," accountants, lawyers and money-movers were considered as respected and trustworthy members of society.

But over the past few years these professions have produced some of the dregs of society.

They are crawling out from under rocks in ever-increasing numbers. When you get robbed by a thug you know you are being done and it is usually for what is in your house or on your person, maybe with a bashing thrown in.

This other form of low life cleans out everything you own, your life savings, house, health, happiness and perhaps even your life, if you have a heart problem.

While doing it they treat you like a friend, call you by your first name, meet you at church then have the gall to charge you for being ripped off . . .